Emphasizes Personal Service in Charity Work

I. Edwin Goldwasser of New York Urges Closer Contact

I. Edwin Goldwasser, prominent New York communal worker, spoke to five hundred campaign workers and subscribers of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies who gathered at a luncheon at the Mt. Royal Hotel on Sunday, October the 21st.

He said that since the social needs developed in a group the size of the Jewish community of Montreal required per capita contribution to charity of $3.80, $200,000 in annual subscriptions sought by the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies is a conservative demand.

The address of Mr. Goldwasser came after a talk by A. H. Jassby, chairman of the executive committee, who pointed out that while the needs of the poor were increasing the income of the Federation had fallen off during the past four years since the last campaign.

Appeals were made by Lyon Cohen, president of the Federation and by Michael Hirsch, who presided at the luncheon. Mr. Hirsch appealed to the workers to instil in those they met a better understanding of the principles of federated philanthropy.

At the conclusion of the meeting, when Mr. E. M. Berliner called for subscriptions, there was instant response, as guests announced increases in their personal subscriptions.

In the afternoon there were meetings held at the Bnai Jacob Synagog and His Majesty's Theatre. Alderman Lyon W. Jacobs, K.C., presided at the Synagog and there were addresses by Michael Hirsch, I. Edwin Goldwasser, Lyon Cohen, Rabbi Julius Berger, Rabbi B. R. Brickner, of Toronto, and H. M. Marler, M.P. Mr. Marler conveyed to the audience a message from Brigadier-General McCuaig.

Rabbi Berger, in a scholarly address, said that the works of charity which the Jew terms righteousness, is one of the foundation stones of the Jewish religion. Rabbi Brickner, of Toronto, said that the Jews of the entire Dominion were watching to see what Montreal would do in this present campaign. After the meeting Mr. J. Latl, president of the Bnai Jacob Synagog reported over eight hundred dollars in subscriptions from persons in moderate circumstances.

A concurrent meeting was held at His Majesty's Theatre, where H. M. Marler, M.P., E. M. Berliner and Lyon Cohen were the principal speakers. There will be daily luncheons at one o'clock at the Mount Royal Hotel, where all division heads and captains will make their reports. A gigantic clock will mark the progress of the campaign and huge signs will contain the quotas of the various teams.

At the head table at the luncheon at the Mt. Royal were Moe Rittenberg, Robert Hirsch, Al. Lesser, A. L. Gittelson, Merton Robinson, Isaac Friedman, Rabbi B. R. Brickner, Rabbi H. Abramowitz, Rabbi Max Merritt, E. M. Berliner, Michael Hirsch, I. Edwin Goldwasser, H. M. Marler, M.P.; Ald. L. W. Jacobs, K.C.; M. C. Ginsberg, A. H. Jassby, Lyon Cohen, B. Rubin, Jos. Levinson, Sr., and J. Kellert.

Two delegations, for and against the proposed separate school panel, presented their views to the Protestant School Commissioners at a conference which was held on Thursday, Sept. 18.

One group pleaded that no change be made in the present system of co-education of Jews and Protestants, saying that the financial difficulty had been solved, and that there was no reason for segregation as the Jews did not wish to "run" the board, but desired representation only to help solve problems concerning them. The spokesman of this group asked for a referendum.

Against this view, another delegation urged that the Protestants had the right to preserve the denominational character of their schools, as guaranteed by the British North America Act. They also asked for separate schools in order to facilitate the religious instruction, and the teaching of Jewish traditions which, they claimed, would develop better citizenship.

Those who favoured separate schools were: Rabbi H. Cohen, L. Solomon, Louis Fitch, Michael Garber, H. M. Caiserman, L. Zucker, Isaac Lande and J. Wiseman.

The opponents of the proposal were: Dr. Nathan Gordon, Maxwell Goldstein, K.C., Michael Hirsch, Lionel Covicnsky, Rabbi Joseph Corcos, Rabbi H. Abramowitz, David S. Friedman, S. L. Friedman, John Michaels and Rabbi M. J. Merritt.

A meeting attended by hundreds of Montreal Jews, October 17, at the Shaar Hashomayim Community Centre, under the auspices of the Young People's assembly of the Shaar Hashomayim Synagog, took the form of a symposium on the school question. Rabbi Abramowitz presided. The speakers were Louis Fitch, an advocate of the separate school theory, Mr. Nathan Gordon, a leader of the opposing party, and Mr. Lyon Cohen, who made a plea for "thorough amiable discussion between both parties."

Rabbi Max J. Merritt and Mr. Louis Fitch, the speakers at the meeting of the Maccabean Circle, which was held on Sunday at 2.30 in the ball room of the McGill Union, took as their subject the school problem. Hundreds of the students and their friends were present.

The following ladies were on the Temple Emanu-El Sisterhood team which assisted Federation in its recent drive: Convenor, Mrs. J. D. Kuppenheimer; Workers—Mesdames I. Rubinovitch, I. Friedman, B. The Moot Court of McGill University met on the 16th for a sitting of the Judicial Committee of Privy Council to argue a celebrated labor case. The case for the non-union men was ably upheld by H. J. Seman, Law '24; and S. L. Samuelsohn, Law '24. Messrs. Howard O. Lagen, B.A., and R. O'Dowd, B.A., represented the union men.

Review Junior Section

Dear Cousins:

Come one! Come all! Because we do want a get-together party . . . and the sooner the better. But this is to be a rather curious party, because instead of attending in person, each and every girl and boy is to be represented by a letter or a poem or a story. And therefore the thing to do is to make your letter or poem or story tell the truth about you, so that we will see you as you are . . . or as you would like to be. Now, judging from his letter, I'm sure Beano would be good fun, although, mind you, methinks he hath a serious strain too. And Fannie Fleming, I imagine, likes to read a great deal. And Abe, I guess, is a "wiz" at mathematics, but mebbe not so good at Latin (am I right, Abe?) . . . and so forth and so on. It will be almost like a dress-up party but more novel. So let's get things straight.

The place—The Review Junior Section.
The time—At once.
The guests—Every single girl or boy is welcome.

So come along via the pen and paper route. Address your letters, poems, stories, riddles, jokes, etc., etc., to either Cousin Judith or Cousin David, 319 Bay Street, Toronto. There will be prizes for the cleverest letter, poem and story.

Cousin Judith.

Dear Boys and Girls:

There is one thing that I enjoy above all and that is browsing in a library. 'Course you know that browsing means? Picking up first a dusty green-gold book that opens of itself, right at the beginning of a witty passage . . . then a stodgy fat volume with the dearest of pictures of old world "courtiers gay" and "ladies grand" . . . next a matter-of-fact pamphlet on -isms . . . and so forth and so on, up one row of shelves and down another. Delightful pastime, and exciting too, because one never knows what to expect. This morning I was a lucky "browser." I found a very clever little book of Hebrew verses, some of which I am passing on to you. Some were written by Jehuda Halevi, one of the finest of the Spanish Hebrew poets. Halevi was born in Toledo, Spain, about the end of the 11th century, and as his parents were well provided with wordly possessions, he received an excellent education. Although he followed the medical profession with conspicuous success, he is chiefly known as the author of some philosophical works and of numerous charming poems in Hebrew. Heinrich Heine had this to say of Halevi, "When his soul was on the point of leaving heaven, it was kissed by the Creator. This kiss re-echoed afterwards in the poet's mind, and vibrated in all the poetical offsprings of his genius." . . . You will find here below, one or two of his poems as well as several from the pens of other brilliant Hebrew poets. I do hope that you will enjoy them as much as I did.

Cousin David.

ON A RAIN CLOUD

Without an eye it weeps, and we
Do laugh with joy its kiss to see,
But when its eyeless face is dry,
'Tis then our turn to weep and sigh.

THE GREY HAIR

I plucked it right out, when it thus to me said:

But a score of my friends soon will make mock of thee."

THE MOUTH AND THE EARS

My friend, speak always once, but listen twice;
This, I would have you know, is sound advice;
For God hath given you and all your peers

THE MISER AND THE FISHERMAN

A miser once into a river fell,
Hard by a boatman heard his frenzied yell;
He swiftly ran and cried, "Give me your hand,
And I shall bring you safely back to land."
"Give," moaned the miser, "when I've ne'er before Given—no, never!" He was seen no more.

THE MISER AND THE POOR

A miser once dreamed he had given away
Some bread to a beggar he met on the way.
In terror he awoke, and he solemnly swore,

AN EPITAPH

Here lies Nachshon, man of great renown,
Who won much glory in his native town:
'Twas hunger that killed him, and they let him die—
They give him statues now, and gaze and sigh—
While Nachshon lived, he badly wanted bread,
Now he is gone, he gets a stone instead.

AUTHORS' CLUB

SCHOOL-ROOM TROUBLES

After going home from school yesterday I found to my dismay that I had forgotten one of my books. It was a cold winter day and when I reached the schoolroom I was tired and sat down to rest. Suddenly I heard a voice say:

"Will that tiresome girl ever go? I believe she has fallen asleep." It was Mrs. Clock talking to Mrs. Pointer. "I don't care if she has or not, I mean to have a quarrel with you!" said Mrs. Pointer pointedly. "Oh, pray Mrs. Pointer, what have I done to invite your ill-will?"

"Nothing much! Only yesterday a girl turned to her neighbour and said "That horrid pointer! Only yesterday that teacher tapped my fingers with it and I wish I could break it, the horrid poky thing!"

"Really, Mrs. Pointer, if I were you I would not worry about them. It won't be our fault if they come to ruin. To-day I heard a girl say, "Slow-poke! Here I have been watching it for two minutes, I'm sure, and it hasn't moved!" Now, Mrs. Pointer, it really isn't my fault I am slow, for I can't go faster than I am set; if I do I get breathless. But don't take it so hard, Mrs. Pointer. It'll do you no good; you're almost out of breath now."

"Goodness! goodness! Those dreadful girls! I'd like to give them each a good spanking. They always are insulting us. But far be it from me to dishearten you, Mrs. Clock. I shall take a nap now and oh! you poor dear, you have to work all the time. After all, some folks are worse off than I am! Good-night! Good-night!

Suddenly I awakened with a start. I had been dozing and it was quite late now. I took my books and set off home. But I have not forgotten my dream and I treat Mrs. Pointer far more considerately and never grumble at Mrs. Clock for I know she can't help it if she goes slowly for she gets out of breath, poor dear, if she goes fast!

BETTY'S LIFE

Betty was just going on six years. Her mother had died when she was five years old and her father when she was four. The neighbours next door had taken her to an orphanage as they were too poor to keep Betty.

She felt very lonesome at the orphanage although she had many friends. Betty was left all alone in the world. One day a woman came to the orphanage and asked for Betty Brown. Betty was taken to her aunt's house in the country where she lived for a long time. Her aunt told her that she knew nothing about the happenings until the other day when the people of the orphanage informed her about Betty. Betty used to spend her days playing, taking care of the chickens and her favourite pets.

A month afterwards Betty's aunt received some bad news, announcing the death of her father. She felt very sad and kept awake at nights. Betty went out into her garden and picked the most beautiful bouquet in the garden and placed it on a table in her aunt's room. Her aunt felt very happy at the thought of Betty getting the flowers and felt a little happier.

Betty grew up to be a very clever girl, and took teaching as her profession. She told many of her pupils of her past life which was very sad.

She was very popular and had many friends and one day got the best friend she ever had, and was married.

Dear Cousin Judith:

I was real glad to read that I was one of the prize-winners. I was so happy that I jumped up and shouted, "Hurrah for the Review Junior Section!"

I am sending in an original story of mine for the new contest. Can I try the letter one too? I did not want to send one in now because I did not know if I could.

I do hope you will like my story.

Best wishes,
I remain,
A happy cousin,
Fannie Fleming.

P.S.—I am sending a self-addressed envelope for the prize-money.—F.F.

Well Fanny:

I'm awfully glad you were pleased when you learned that you had been awarded the prize. Why of course you may send in entries for any or all of the contests. Here's luck! I hope that you are intending to visit us regularly now. Come . . . and bring your friends. Next time you write tell me something about yourself, about your school and Sunday school and whether you are interested in any clubs. Your story is very good. Let's have some more.

Cousin Judith.

Editorial

HE MEANT WELL, BUT—

Israel Zangwill came, spoke and created a terrible rumpus in New York last week. He veritably threw a bomb into a gathering which without his presence would have been born dead. Zangwill's address put the Jewish Congress on the front page of every New York newspaper.

He himself is authority for the statement that it was carefully prepared, difficult to deliver, and the greatest of all his many public utterances. The lecture, which contained not less than 25,000 words and as many more probably as one's endurance powers to count after this figure can stand, took over two hours to deliver. It is typically Zangwillian, chuck full of clever ideas, with some of which we agree, scintillating with aphorisms, witticism and bon mots. Zangwill called the address, which is an analysis of the Jewish world situation, "Watchman, What of the Night?" There is no denying that it is full of dark gloominess, of shade and shadow with very little light flickering through. It is a mound of words covering a heap of thoughts so jumbled together, and so devoid of form that as you read column after column in endless succession you ask yourself, "Well, what about it? Granted everybody else but Zangwill is wrong, what solution do you propose?" And here is where Zangwill fails miserably. A master in the art of destructive criticism, a genius in proving that even if you're right you're wrong, he does not possess the essentially happy faculty of constructive thought—nor of constructive leadership. It was therefore most distressing for the Jewish Congress leaders, whose guest Zangwill was, to be compelled to repudiate his central thesis [illegible] Zionism, Zionist leadership and the politics of Great Britain in Palestine. This Dr. S. S. Wise did in a masterly way when he rose to the occasion following Israel Zangwill's speech: "Israel speaks for Israel, not for Israel."

[illegible] Zangwill declared himself as the only loyal Herzlean Zionist [illegible] he more bitterly attacked the Zionists that [illegible] Declaration for misleading the Jewish people and [illegible] with the Arabs and the Jews [illegible] Imperialistic politics in the near East. He insisted that England be forced to keep [illegible] promise. Zangwill is a maximum Zionist and is dissatisfied with a minimum programme. He might therefore be called a Bolshevik Zionist. He maintains that the Zionist leaders are weaklings and poor politicians and therefore the skilful English statesmen were able "to put it all over on us," whereas the Arabs, being shrewder hands at "the game," are playing their cards against England with greater skill.

"Palestine is a powder magazine into which Zionism is throwing a match." Therefore he urges that the Jewish people withdraw from Palestine altogether, and—well, here he switches his train of thought and instead of offering a solution, he gets shunted into a miasma of words and thoughts about the Jewish problem which leads nowhere.

The address of Zangwill is, nevertheless, worth reading for its many flashes of wisdom and its tremendous power of suggestion. After all is said and done, though we may not always agree with him, Zangwill is one of the greatest Jews in the world to-day. He is one of England's really great littérateurs and a rare spirit. Now that Nordau is dead, he is the only fearless tribune our people possess. There is something prophetic in his daring, though his utterances do not always sound as though the voice of God were speaking through him.

Zangwill is correct when he says that England is not altogether altruistic in her Palestinian policy; that she has interests in the near East, such as the Suez Canal, India and Egypt, and that it is to her advantage to have a friendly people such as the Jews located in Palestine. That little country, located at the very heart of the East —the junction of three continents—is destined to again become the centre of world political action. The Jews are willing to colonize the country at their own expense; they bring to the task their labor, their zeal, their wealth, their passionate love and their loyalty to the mandatory power. Any other people colonizing there would bring with them an alien flag, the army and navy of a hostile power to protect their interests. It would seem, therefore, as if England has everything to gain and nothing to lose by Jewish colonization.

Though this be true, it is nevertheless also true that the hopes and aspirations of our people coincide with Britain's interests in Palestine. Destiny has agreed that England and Israel should be partners in the holy mission of upbuilding Palestine. Under these circumstances what is more natural than that both should have much to gain from the partnership? If England appears not to be accelerating the plans for the speedy materialization of the Balfour Declaration, it is because she never accelerates evolution in the field of Empire development. Those who know how England has muddled through in Egypt and Ireland and how she is muddling through in India, realize that she is merely feeling out her way in Palestine. That is England's method. There is, however, something which Zangwill forgets—and it is the one thing that matters most in viewing the situation—namely, that when two parties enter into a partnership and draw up a contract, it is exceedingly necessary that each party shall have implicit confidence in the other's good-will and intentions. In this alliance which England has made with us, it is essential that we shall place our complete trust in the good intentions of England to carry out the spirit of the Balfour declaration which means that Palestine shall in time become the, not merely a, Jewish homeland. We believe that England will carry out her promise. We know that it will be a long and difficult process. We believe and know this just because it happens to be to the interest of Great Britain to make of Palestine an autonomous Jewish country. The process of making Palestine a Jewish homeland, depends in reality, not so much on Great Britain, as it does on the Jews themselves. Why delude ourselves? It is not up to Great Britain to make Palestine the national Jewish centre. It is up to the Jews. Britain can only be the passive factor. It depends on how fast the Jews can pour money and men into the country, how zealous we will be in organizing necessary industries, purchasing good land of strategic value, bringing in Chaluzim, etc., etc.; not on how much free swamp land the government will allow us and thereby give the Arab agitators fresh fuel for their flames. Great Britain cannot give us Palestine. We must take it—not as Zangwill or Jabotinsky believe, by force and aggression. This type of colonizing conquest ceased long ago. Economic penetration is the only method. Why complain that there is no free immigration into Palestine when hundreds of Chaluzim are unemployed now in the country and last year we are told some fourteen of these Chaluzim committed suicide because of the desperation into which they were driven by lack of work? If capital will create a demand for labor, no immigration laws in the world can stop the influx of people. Capital will attract people and people will attract capital. This is the cycle. If, in the next ten to twenty years, we can pour into Palestine millions of pounds of capital and a few million Jews, then Palestine will be the Jewish homeland, Arabs or no Arabs, Mandate or no Mandate, politics or no politics. The land always belongs to those who inhabit it.

There is still another consideration of international politics. The British Empire is in reality a commonwealth of free nations and not the old type of empire dominated by centralized force. In this commonwealth of nations, Palestine will be a constituent nation like Canada, Ireland, Australia, New Zealand, India and Egypt. In this voluntary association of free nations, composed of different nationalities, races and religious groups, is to be found the strength of what is the greatest federation of people the world has ever known. What holds this commonwealth of nations together? An ideal—an ideal of brotherhood, based on the principles of justice and righteousness, which the British have in common with the Jews, because of a common influence—the Scriptures. It is because we believe in this ideal which holds the British commonwealth of nations together that we Zionists are ready and willing to put our trust in England.

Zangwill is an excellent novelist and playwright, a brilliant thinker and a fearless tribune, a warm Jew and a great humanitarian, but he is a tactless politician and a misleading leader. His address should have been delivered for Jewish consumption only and never been broadcasted to a non-Jewish audience. The Jewish mind knows how to take Zangwill and how and what to discount, whereas the non-Jewish world is likely to take the address at its full face value. In fact, this is exactly what has happened. The headings of many of the New York dailies printed extracts from the address with headlines such as "Political Zionism Is Dead," and the like. It is these headlines which did the damage. Our enemies, notwithstanding Zangwill's reassurances, are making capital of his words, to hurt our cause in Palestine and throughout the world. One thing is certain, though the damage has been done, Zangwill had no such intentions. Like the prophets, he spoke his mind and heart freely and fully. Would that he were more the practical priest and less the prophet. Yet, for better or for worse, he is still our Zangwill.

When in the summer certain New York radicals well-known in the garment trades' unions, bought the New York Call, Toronto Saturday Night printed an editorial around the Jewish-sounding names of the purchasers and said that such people Canada could do without. It seems that the garment workers can also do without nineteen out of twenty-five of its executive which were ousted recently because of their communistic activities. This action of the garment workers, which barred the nineteen directors from further activity for three years, means open warfare against communism and any other isms which such a paper as Saturday Night places to the credit of foreigners and Jews if possible. Saturday Night hasn't complimented the garment workers on their house-cleaning and probably won't say a word until the agitators return three years hence to exercise the boring-from-within policy of William Z. Foster, who, though the prince of Reds, is not a Jew.

In the speech to the American Jewish Congress in which Israel Zangwill said that Zion as a nation is a vanished hope, he said so many other things that his address went to Jews and non-Jews by the millions in this country, England and Palestine, as the New York papers implied by their unusual printing of column upon column of Zangwill verbatim.

The reason for this is that Zangwill, pacifist, thinker, and humanitarian, is too much a citizen of the world not to be claimed by the world at large. What Zangwill said about Zionism showed once again his readiness to examine a situation for the truth and his fearlessness in setting his face against the crowd, having arrived at what seemed to him to be the truth. Such a man's opinions cannot be discounted even by those who refuse to accept his pronouncement as to the death of political Zionism. They are probably still weighing over what he said with less faith in their own former judgments, because when Zangwill speaks men know that it is from the highest pinnacle of clear thinking. His is a position of comparative isolation and what issues from it must reach to the remotest confines of the world of civilized people.

Zangwill's "airplane survey" of the Jewish situation as a whole, aside from its Zionist aspects, shows the great clarity of vision uncommon to popular leaders and carries added weight by the fact that Zangwill is a man free from personal axes to grind. From whatever angle Zangwill approached a Jewish problem he shed light and left with the American Jews the counsel of a wise man. Whether they agreed with him or not, his very presence in the country of the Ku-Klux Klan must have given them some of the courage of this greatest thinker in Israel.

"At five I shall be dragging my feet homeward. And when I enter my little room, I know there will be no messages received, no telephone calls to answer, no dinner engagements to keep, no addresses to make, no marriages to perform, no empty echoes of whispering admirers: "Doctor, you did grand." My little table will be there with papers and pencils: faithful co-workers in my efforts at mental liberation. My bed in the corner will be waiting to receive me and warm me in the absence of warm living friends. Books, old and new, abundant in living characters, will talk with me while my erstwhile companions are silent. And when I lie down to sleep I shall retire with a conscience that is neither mortgaged nor bargained away. This is my consolation. For this ease of mind I paid a huge indemnity. I am now compelled to face hardships and privations that are reminiscent of my school and college days, but it is well worth the price. I regret it not. I am happy. I am happy to be able to work. I am happy to be human again. And I am thrice happy to be hungry for things worth while."—Ex-Rabbi Harry R. Richmond, in the "Jewish Forum."

Girls' Auxiliary of the Old Folks' Home

The Girls' Auxiliary of the old Folks' Home reopened their activities for the fall and winter season, with an initial general meeting on Tuesday, October 9, 1923. The reunion of the girls, after a summer of forced inactivity, was encouraging, and several new members applied.

The matter of an entertainment for the ladies and gentlemen of the Home, and the campaign of activities to be undertaken for the coming season were discussed. To this end, a delegation of the Ladies' Auxiliary were admitted to discuss ways and means, and of the many plans submitted, the committees in charge will report on from time to time, as taken up, as until the Federated Budget is again renewed, or discontinued, nothing definite can be decided upon.

The entertainment for the inmates of the Home will take place in about two weeks' time. The social committee will report on this matter at the next meeting, which will be held October 23.

Shaarey Zedek Synagogue

The services at the Shaarey Zedek Synagogue during the High Holidays were well attended, and there were many signs of a much keener interest on the part of the congregation in the Synagogue's welfare. The Tenth Annual meeting, adjourned from September 30, was held on the above date, there being over 60 members in attendance. All unfinished business was dealt with, and the annual election of officers was then proceeded with. The retiring president, Mr. Max Steinkopf, the vice-president, Mr. Maurice Halter, and the treasurer, Mr. A. W. Myers, were again elected by popular acclamation. Five new members were elected to serve on the Board of Trustees for a period of two years, and together with the six trustees who are now beginning their second year in office, the personnel of the Board is as follows: M. Haid, L. Booke, O. Diamond, D. Morganstern, N. J. Weidman, Max Heppner, Aaron Cohen, Paul Bider, H. Steinkopf, R. S. Robinson, E. L. Weidman, with the first six members serving their second year. Mr. S. Hart Green acted as chairman.

The Friday night services commenced for the season on October 5. New features include a uniform prayer book with a booklet containing special prayers and hymns. Responsive reading and English hymns have also been introduced. The service commences at 8 p.m. and lasts only one hour, including the address. The subject of Rabbi Samuel's address next week is "Mr. Zangwill and the Jewish Question."

Rabbi and Mrs. Samson were installed in their new home on Wednesday evening by the committee which undertook the provision of a home for the Rabbi of the congregation. The house, a commodious one, is situated at 31 Furby Street.

Major D. M. Duncan was the speaker at the Shaarey Zedek last week. He spoke on the achievements of the Federated Budget during its first year of operation. The Federated Budget has given every satisfaction in communal circles.

Memorial Society

That the Memorial Society of the University of Manitoba is now a recognized factor in the community life, was seen at the first general meeting, held Sunday, October 7, in the Convocation Hall of the University. The elaborate programme arranged included Rev. Elliot Grant's address on "The Jews and the Future Internationalism," and a reading by Miss Sowerna Brownstone, Russia's "Die Dollar."

The students are diligently applying themselves and no admissions have been received by the chairman to the study circle at the last meeting. During the summer the three study groups, Jewish music, history and orthodoxy, met weekly as previously. Six large study groups have now been formed, namely, talk on Old Testament, leader, Miss Ruth A. Cohen, Jewish studies Schools and others, Mr. Marcus Shyman, Jewish history meetings, Rev. H. J. Symons; economics, plans pending to avoid lie as far as possible; Mr. Joel Kissin; Jewish music, dramatics, Miss Rowena Brownstone. There will be a second history group and Yiddish literature.

Plans are being made for the annual Menorah freshman's reception, an international debate with the Minnesota Menorah and a Jewish play. The various committees are directed by the president, Max M. Wintrobe.

BIJUR AND PROSKEUR SLATED FOR RE-NOMINATION

Hearst Reported Backing Meyer

New York (J.T.A.).—The re-nomination of Justice Nathan Bijur to the State Supreme Court Bench by the Republicans is assured, according to political gossip.

It is believed, too, that the Republicans favouring a non-partisan judiciary will support Justice Joseph M. Proskeur, who is a democratic appointee of Governor Smith.

It is thought also likely that Tammany may support Justice Bijur. Friends of Justice Abraham G. Meyer of the City Court say that William Randolph Hearst will back him.

NEW YORK FEDERATION CHIEF ELECTED BY NEWARK CHARITIES

New York (J.T.A.).—T. D. Zuckerman, chief of the Budget Department of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies of New York City, has been elected executive director of the Newark Conference of Jewish Charities. He will assume his new office on January 1, 1924.

Mr. Zuckerman was formerly on the statistical staff of the Bureau of Municipal Research, and for the past three years has been making intensive studies of the individual needs of the ninety-one institutions supported by the Federation.

His wide knowledge of the administration needs of charitable organizations is indicated by the approval of the Distribution Committee of Federation of his division of its three and a half million dollar budget.

FORTY JEWISH FAMILIES HOMELESS FROM FIRE

Lemberg (J.T.A.).—The Galician town of Narayanbor was swept by fire. Seventy dwellings were destroyed, forty of which were Jewish. Two "beth medrashim" also went up in the flames.

The homes visited by the fire were those of the most destitute Jews. The homes of the better situated Jews are all overcrowded and it is virtually impossible to accommodate even temporarily the fire victims.

Their condition is thus one of great distress.

"ORT" REPRESENTATIVE RAPS JEWISH COMMUNISTS

London (J.T.A.).—If American Jewry knew the truth about the Jewish Communists of Russia, they would not permit the Yevsek (Jewish Communists) organizations to handle the relief money for Russian Jews.

This was the statement made to the Jewish Telegraphic Agency by Jacob Bashefin, representative of the "Ort" who is now en route to America after a tour of the Soviet land. He declares that the Jews in Russia are in mortal dread of the Jewish Communists.

Y.M.H.A. WIN THE SENIOR CITY TITLE

In a hard-fought game played at Riverdale Park the Y.M.H.A. defeated the St. George's 12-11. St. George's started out with a rush and Rankin picked up the ball when Cohen fumbled and ran fifty yards for a touch. The "Y" however came right back in the second quarter with seven points and half time found the "Y" in the lead 8-6. The second half was a battle royal. The St. George's continually ripped through for large gains but the work of Cohen, Soloman, Goldman and Gutkin on the half line saved the day for the "Y." Hewitt did some good tackling for St. George's, and was down on every kick. Goldman featured with a pretty field goal and Barney Cohen's mammoth punts accounted for three points. The game ended at St. George's thirty-yard line. It was a hard game for them to lose but it was a well earned victory for the "Y" team.

This win doubtless established a record in the City Rugby League history. The "Y" team who played under the Balfour name in 1921, won the Juvenile title; in 1922, they won the Junior honours and now have annexed the Senior city title and earned the right to play off for the Junior O.R.F.U. title. The team has come along well under the capable coaching of Bob Abate and should make a good showing in the finals.

The following was the line-up on Saturday.

Y.M.H.A.—Flying wing, Gornack; halves, Godtkin, Goldman, Cohen; quarter, Lavine; snap, Einbinder; insides, Salaminsky, Cieman; middles, Samuels, Hersenhoren; outsides, Lister, Altman; spares, Lister, Soloman, Sher, Jubas, Males, Litovits.

St. George's—Flying wing, Hewitt; halves, Whitherly, Parks, Weller; quarter—Berth; snap, Wiseman; insides, McNair, McCord; middles, Saunders, Hewing; outsides, Rankin, Stevenson; spares, McKenzie, Erwing, Thompson, Granelly.

"Save the Federation"

By S. B. Kaufman

The entire Jewish community of Montreal, headed by such prominent men as Sir Mortimer B. Davis, Mark Workman, Maxwell Goldstein, K.C., M.A., Peter Bercovitch, K.C., Lyon Cohen, Michael Hirsch, Rabbi M. J. Merritt, Rabbi Abramowitz and others, are devotedly and enthusiastically engaged in the "Save the Federation" campaign. Sir Mortimer Davis is paying all the expenses of the campaign which will amount to several thousand dollars, in order to save the Federation.

If the slogan of "Save the Federation" fits the Montreal campaign, it will also fit our Toronto situation.

Many appeals have been sent out from the Federation office with hardly any response. Many heartrending tales were related concerning our struggling widows, orphans, sick and aged, but without awakening the finer feelings of the "Yiddische Heart."

The time has come to save our own Federation. We cannot continue under the same conditions any longer. It will be up to the Jewish citizens who have the obligations and moral responsibilities to their poor and to the community at large to say whether the Federation shall be saved or whether it should close its doors.

We have a Jewish population of forty thousand and many difficult philanthropic and social problems. We can only make an effort to solve them when we will have sufficient funds and when we will be properly organized.

The Orthodox, Reformed, Zionist and Labor groups are all working enthusiastically and harmoniously in order to save the Federation in Montreal. The same enthusiasm and harmony can save the Federation in Toronto. If we are true to our traditions, we will all have to unite to save the Federation.

To save our Federation, we are now organizing a campaign to reach the entire Jewish community. The Federation is not in a financial position to engage extra clerical assistance which is required for the preparation of the campaign. For the present we are in need of a number of volunteers to assist us in compiling lists of names, in classifying them according to industry, trade and profession and for other preliminary work. We will need at least five hundred men and women, strong in mind and in heart, to assist us in the campaign.

Will you be one of the volunteers? We must act immediately. If you desire to be one of those who will save the Federation, please communicate with our office, 218 Simcoe Street, or Adelaide 6071.

JOSEF WINOGRADOFF,

great dramatic baritone, in recital at Standard Theatre, cor. Dundas St. and Spadina Ave., Tuesday evening, November 6th, at 8.15, assisted by Toronto Benzman Chorus. Conductor, J. Dorskind.

In the year 1913, in the city of Kharkov, Russia, the civic authorities, social luminaries and general populace united to pay homage to Josef Winogradoff by a Festival Jubilee to commemorate the 25th anniversary of his association with the Russian operatic and concert stage. This is a typical instance exemplifying the widespread popularity and prestige of this idolized artist, who, with the possible exception of Chaliapine, has been one of the most dominant figures in the musical life of his native land for over a quarter of a century.

Despite his advanced years, Winogradoff still retains his powerful physique and his voice has lost nothing of its natural melodiousness, virility or cunning. As a dramatic artist he is still the striking figure which placed him, in his [illegible] Nellie Melba, Louise Lebiache, Jean and Edouard de Reszke, E. Lafitte and Signor Mancinelli.

Zangwill Tells Jews to Give up Palestine Plan

New York.—Zionism must abandon its cherished dream of founding a nation in Palestine because it would be like throwing a lighted match into a powder factory and would start a world conflagration, Israel Zangwill asserted at the opening at Carnegie Hall last night of the American-Jewish Congress. The eminent Jewish author urged Jews all over the world to unite in preventing another war, the first step to which should be, he said, the abolition of passports, visas, frontiers, custom houses "and all other devices that make our planet a mutual irritation society."

Explaining his views on Palestine, Mr. Zangwill said: "Even before sailing for America from England, having booked my passage on a French boat, I was not sure that Anglo-French friction would not prevent my coming. That friction, had it developed, would have set the new Jewry of Palestine in arms against the neighboring French Syria, for both France and England have the right under their mandates to raise local militia for the defense respectively of Syria and Palestine, and, moreover, to use their ports and railways for the passage of their own troops and munitions of war.

"Who would throw a match into such a powder factory as the world has become? No, not only must all the forces of Israel be mobilized against the next war, but we must forego our political hopes in Palestine rather than kindle a conflagration which may ravage the whole world."

Rabbi Wise Takes Exception

That Mr. Zangwill's view was not to be accepted as that of the Jewish Congress was explained by Dr. Stephen S. Wise. Dr. Wise in introducing the speaker said: "It is possible that Mr. Zangwill may say some things to-night to which it will not be possible for this meeting to give complete and unqualified assent." He said the Congress had a liberal mind which could listen to opposite sides of a question. By way of pleasantry, Dr. Wise added, "Mr. Zangwill speaks not for Israel but for Israel Zangwill."

Dr. Wise took occasion to castigate Jews, whom he described as disloyal to Jewry. He referred to the author of a book called "The Jews of America" as "ignoble."

"We frankly condemn the Jews who wish to forget that they are Jews and that their mothers and fathers were Jews before them," he said.

Mr. Zangwill said there was a time when a Jewish state might have arisen in Palestine, but that time had passed. England politically had mishandled the Palestine project, he said, and a recent Congress held at Carlsbad had protested at too late a date against the failure to allot state lands to Jews and against the refusal to permit Jews to regulate their own immigration in Palestine.

"Zionism can rely only upon as much of England's might as spells the policy of England," he continued. "And since the Zionists are ready to accept any conditions, however humiliating, however impractical, it is clear that only a minimum of England's might will be at the disposal of the Jewish national home and that mainly in the British interest."

"Political Zionism is dead," said Mr. Zangwill. "At best all work to be done in Palestine must be done under alien masters, Arab or British, and again we must build on volcanic soil. It was urged by Sir Alfred Mond that the upbuilding of Palestine is a test of Jewry—that by it Israel will be judged. But that test must be refused. The challenge is a trap. There can be no test of a people that is not master in its own house."

Cites Talk with Roosevelt

He said the Arabs were more hostile to the Jews, although Jewish love, medical aid and gold have flowed recklessly in their direction," and the Arabs would out-vote the Jews on the question of immigration.

The speaker referred to a conversation he had with President Roosevelt on Zionism. He said: "In 1904 I myself discussed with President Roosevelt at the White House the whole subject of the relation of American Jews to a Jewish autonomous colony. Roosevelt thought that any official opinion on the subject had best come personally through secretary Hay, who, accordingly, after a most sympathetic conversation, empowered me to publish his opinion that it was open to all American Jews, without the faintest imputation on their patriotism, to take part in the foundation of such a colony.

Mr. Zangwill said he believed Lord Balfour was sincere when he proposed that Palestine be given to the Jews, but the proposal had been couched too vaguely to be practical.

Refers to Jews in America

Referring to Jews in America, the speaker said they had an opportunity to become "more American than Americans." America, he said, instead of finding a way for world peace, apparently was reverting back to "the old malarious swamps of European nationalism."

"In its backward course," he said, "your Ku Klux Klan has not yet arrived at full European bloodthirstiness, but its fanatic alien of American nativity and its banned campaign against the Americanism of Washington and Lincoln with a revival of the medievalism which Europe has never really shaken off."

Urges War upon Klan

Professor James Taft Hatfield has amusingly shown that the whole idea of the Ku Klux Klan is ultimately of German importation, coming from Goethe through Walter Scott. We must fight this propaganda Klan, not because it is a menace to Jews, but because it is a menace to America. You must fight it by all moral weapons, not by mere brute force—[illegible] Judaism, but because of its insults to the Christian Church, which when all is said, was to the Jewish mind under providential auspices the [illegible] spirit [illegible] thing the Klan [illegible]

Mr. Zangwill [illegible] deprecated American imitation of [illegible] declaring that this country is [illegible] to a sort of Nordic nationalism based [illegible]

Pointing out that Jews were still being persecuted not only in Europe but even in Japan and Turkey, Mr. Zangwill said: "If the Jews had the power to extract blood money for our murdered, as Maccabeus did from Greece but the murder of Judaism [illegible] Jewish national treasury would be so replete that the financing of Palestine would be child's play."

Nathan Straus Gets Ovation

Nathan Straus was cheered heartily when he said that although he was seventy-five years old he was glad to accept the post of president of the Congress. He declared that he was going to Palestine next month and that he hoped to devote the rest of his life to his campaign against tuberculosis by urging the pasteurizing of milk.

Delegates representing every state attended the opening business session of the Congress held at the Hotel Commodore in the afternoon. Samuel Untermyer condemned those who agitated against the Jews in this country. Aaron J. Levy, municipal court judge, said the congress, the fourth in the last eight years, was devoted to the cause of Palestine."

American Jewish Congress Disavows Zangwill's Views—Congress Is "Primarily for Palestine"

New York (J.T.A.).—The American Jewish Congress at its convening Monday officially disavowed the views of Israel Zangwill as expressed in his address the night before at Carnegie Hall.

As soon as the Congress assembled Monday, it was evident that the delegates were strongly aroused against the views of Mr. Zangwill and particularly against the manner in which it had been presented in the general press.

Mounting the platform, Rabbi Wise declared that the Congress had listened with entire respect to the address of its distinguished visitor, but it "could not be made too clear that Mr. Zangwill spoke for himself and not for the Congress."

Rabbi Wise maintained that the address of Mr. Zangwill had been misconstrued by the press "headline writers." He said that Zangwill was a Zionist and that his address was not directed against Zionism but against the present Zionist policies.

Mr. Lipsky proposed that the remarks of Rabbi Wise declaring that the views of Zangwill were purely personal and not that of the Congress be taken as expressing the official stand of the Congress. The motion was adopted.

A spirited denunciation of Mr. Zangwill's views was also expressed by Nathan Straus who declared that Zangwill's statement that "political Zionism is dead" was a "beautiful illustration of misinformation." "I wouldn't care if he was my own son," said Mr. Straus, referring to Mr. Zangwill, "I would denounce him for what he said last night. The Zionism Mr. Zangwill proclaimed," he added, "is counterfeit Zionism. I speak from experience. He speaks from hearsay. I have devoted my life to this one cause and I am not going to have people misinformed. I have been in Palestine. I have lived in Palestine. My mind is there. My money is there and my heart is there.

"I saw Mr. Zangwill this morning," continued Mr. Straus. "He said, 'How did my lecture suit you?' I said, 'I differ with you so much we had better go and play golf.'"

Mr. Zangwill was the guest of Mr. Straus at luncheon Monday and took occasion then to defend his much attacked address. He contended that the press had misrepresented his views and put them out of proportion.

The sessions of the Congress Tuesday morning were devoted to the hearing of the reports of the Resolution Committee headed by Judge Hugo Pam. Seven resolutions proposed by the committee were adopted Tuesday.

The only one which met opposition on the floor of the Congress declared, "The American Jewish Congress believing that for the achievement of its aims and purposes it is vitally important that there be created a World Jewish Congress democratically elected and representing the Jewish people of the world as a unit, therefore instructs its Executive Committee to communicate with responsible and representative Jewish national and international organizations to the end that such a world's Jewish Congress be convened as soon as possible."

The fight arose when it was proposed to insert the words "primarily for Palestine" in the clause defining the scope of the Congress.

Judge Hugo Pam urged that the original resolution be adopted, declaring that there would doubtless come before the World Congress many other Jewish problems, such as the situation of Jewry in Eastern Europe. Those championing the amendment, however, contended that the amendment making the primary purpose of the Congress, Palestine, did not bar it from considering other phases of the Jewish problem.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Chairman of the Congress, asked Louis Lipsky to take the Chair so that he (Rabbi Wise) could take the floor and discuss the question. He proposed that the words "primarily for Palestine" should be interpolated in the resolution.

"After what happened Sunday night," said Rabbi Wise, referring to Israel Zangwill's denounciation of the programme of Zionism, "it is necessary to emphasize with all earnestness that any such organization should be for and primarily on behalf of Palestine before anything else."

Nothing, he declared, could be gained by passing resolutions about Mr. Zangwill or what he said, or what he left unsaid, or what he should have said.

CONGRESS CLOSES WITH DEMAND FOR ACTION FROM BRITAIN

Calls upon England to Live up to Mandate in Full

New York (J.T.A.).—A demand that Britain live up in full measure to all the terms of the Mandate under the League of Nations for the upbuilding of Palestine was voiced by the American Jewish Congress in a resolution adopted at the closing session.

The adoption of the resolution is in harmony with the suggestion made by Mr. Zangwill in his address before the Congress in which he severely arraigned Britain for the manner in which it was executing the Mandate.

Mr. Zangwill also assisted in the framing of the resolution which was unanimously adopted. The resolution demands a more liberal immigration policy for Palestine, points out to Great Britain that much more money would flow into the Keren Hayesod if it became perfectly clear that a genuine Jewish national home was being established, and calls upon the government to delay no longer the Palestine national loan.

ASKS ACTION BE HASTENED

"Taking note also of the resolutions of the recent Zionist World Congress at Carlsbad, stating that Jewish immigration to Palestine is too severely restricted, and demanding that the administration of Palestine shall carry out the obligation assumed under the Mandate which provides that it shall encourage in co-operation with the Jewish agency, close settlement by Jews on the land, including state land and waste land not required for public purposes, and if there has been discrimination against Jewish schools in the matter of subsidization;

"This Congress, with full recognition of the difficulties which hamper the noble task undertaken by the British Government, respectfully and gratefully asks it to do all that is possible to remedy the grievances expressed by the Carlsbad Congress.

"The American Jewish Congress is convinced that far larger sums will be poured into Palestine by Jews, both on a philanthropic basis, through the Keren Hayesod, and by way of other organized social and economic enterprises as soon as it will become clear that a Jewish national home will ultimately come into being in the Holy Land. The congress asks the Palestine Government no longer to delay the issue of its projected loan for the development of the resources of the country—a loan which, it is sure, will be generously taken up by the Jews of the World as soon as it is clear that the Jewish national home will profit by it no less than the rest of Palestine.

"At the same time the congress expresses to the Arabs its earnest desire for peace and goodwill and brotherly co-operation in rebuilding for civilization the ruined, neglected, half-empty, yet supremely historical land which both races inhabit. It asks them to recognize that for more than 1,850 years the dreams and hopes and prayers of the Jewish people have been centred upon this land, and that the return of large numbers of Jews to it would bring a blessing to all its inhabitants and would build a bridge of mutual understanding between the East and West.

"We further trust that the Arabs of Palestine will meet their Jewish kinsmen in a fraternal spirit, and will recognize the spirit of the Balfour Declaration so that all sections of the population shall enjoy freedom together with a prospect of attaining ultimate autonomy and membership in the League of Nations.

"Finally the Congress extends its fraternal greetings to all sections of Christianity and Islam interested in the Holy Land. We trust and pray that Jerusalem will be rebuilt in our day and become the centre of world peace for all nations, races and religions, as our great Jewish prophets predicted, and that the darkness which at this time threatens the extinction of civilization will pass away and we will work unitedly for the common good of all mankind."

A heated debate arose following the presentation of the report of the Committee on Education. The report stated that less than 25 per cent. of Jewish children between the ages of six and thirteen in the United States were receiving any kind of Jewish education. The report introduced a resolution urging American Jewry to support all undertakings aiming to promote opportunities for Jewish education.

Fearing that a proposal for a permanent committee on education might give the reform wing some voice or measure of control over the education of children reared in orthodoxy, a section of the delegates rebelled openly and threatened that adherence to such a policy would result in the secession of all orthodox Jews. Rabbi Saul Sibler of Chicago and Rabbi Abraham Shapiro of Utica headed the opposition, and had much to do with the decision of the Congress to return the offending resolution to the committee on education, where, with their collaboration a new proposal was drafted limiting the activity of the committee of the gathering of statistics, their dissemination and advancing the cause of Jewish education. In this form the resolution was adopted. Rabbi Stephen S. Wise was elected president of the Congress, Samuel Untermyer, Judge Aaron J. Levy and Joseph Barondess, vice-presidents. Bernard G. Richards was chosen executive secretary and Nathan Straus as honorary president.

In the course of an address before the congress, Reuben Brainin declared, "Dr. Wise is the greatest Jew of our generation, although he is reformed."

$200,000 PLEDGED IN ONE NIGHT FOR JEWISH EDUCATION

New York (J.T.A.).—The sum of $200,000 was pledged at the dinner at the Hotel Astor of the Jewish Educational Association toward the half-million dollar fund which is being sought.

Among those who spoke were Judge Rosalsky, chairman of the campaign, Louis Marshall and Felix M. Warburg. Samuel C. Lamport presided.

A letter was read from President Coolidge praising the work of the Association. A letter was also received from Israel Zangwill in which he extolled the plan of the Jewish educational Association as "one of the finest manifestations of the abiding interest of the Jews of New York in religious education." Mr. Zangwill stresses the need of teaching Judaism as well as the Hebrew language.

"In my recent speech," Mr. Zangwill writes, "at Carnegie Hall, I labored to convince the American Jewish Congress that no merely racial segregation of our people can last except it be in a homeland of its own or in one of those old East European milieus where ancient racial minorities leading a mute life are part of the historic and natural order.

"Even in these communities, however, though our people may have been unconsciously preserved by the will to live of the toughest race in history, the conscious conserving force has always been religion. Still more in Judaism—the frontier of fiery faith—the only means of preserving small and scattered communities.

"I do not believe in 'Jewish' education if that merely means artificially sundering children the Hebrew language and history, for that is only carrying on the race isolation, which [illegible] unless except under autonomous conditions, such as in Palestine or in any other political Jewish territory.

"Should it [illegible] making your children Judaists, then you are placing the great American Jewry on its only right basis.

The Ottawa Jewish Sunday School has recommenced classes for the fall and winter season. The roll at present contains the names of 150 girls between the ages of 6 and 16 years, taught by a staff of eight young men and women who volunteer their services. The school meets every Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Talmud Torah building on George Street.

At the Chanukas-Habaith, or housewarming, of the Jewish Literary and Dramatic Society and the Jewish National Workers' Alliance, Ottawa Local, held last Sunday night in their finely decorated and newly acquired hall at 78½ Rideau Street, Mr. Hyman Edelstein, president, gave a brief address. He urged the importance of progressive workers having quarters of their own and he regretted that Mr. H. Simonoff, president of the Dramatic Society, was unable to take the chair, or to speak owing to an affection of the throat.

The Literary and Dramatic Society is staging a performance for the Hebrew Sick Benefit Society. Mr. B. Rhinewine of Toronto will lecture in the hall on October 28th, on the subject: "What Is Culture?" On November 4th D. Goldstein, general secretary of the National Workers' Alliance, will address an audience on topics of general interest.

Last Sunday night's concert was the first of a series to be held this winter. Those taking part were: Mr. and Mrs. D. Green, Miss D. Saslove, Messrs. B. Fleming, S. Drachler, J. Salter, D. Slover and Master Schwarz, of Montreal. The hall was full to the doors.

There was a large gathering of members and friends present at this opening entertainment. The guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Caplan. A committee which was convened by Mr. M. R. Freedman, who was assisted by F. H. Sinclair, J. Davis and S. Brodie, looked after the arrangements. Mr. S. Brodie had charge of the bridge. In this the winners were Mrs. B. Goldfield and Mr. M. Venis. An excellent dance program was furnished by an orchestra and a buffet supper was served.
